Santa Fe Brewing Company Releases the Santa Fe Gold

Santa Fe, New Mexico – Santa Fe Brewing Company is excited to can their brand new winter seasonal Adobe Igloo for the very first time. Adobe Igloo is a classical spiced Winter Warmer, New Mexico-style. With a hearty malt body and slight caramel sweetness, this 6% ale is rounded out by subtle touches of cacao nibs and New Mexico red chiles. It's perfect for staying warm by the fire or shaking off the chills après ski. "Black IPA became a year-round offering this year, so we had to design a new winter seasonal. With our new talented Brewmaster recently joining the team, we realized we had a tremendous opportunity here to do something special. We already have beers that are great for winter time, with the State Pen Porter and the Imperial Java Stout, but we wanted something that stood out from other cans on the shelves and stood out from other beers you might taste this winter. We wanted something that captured the essence of New Mexico in liquid form, and I think we achieved that nicely," owner, Brian Lock said.

Adobe Igloo is our New Mexican answer to the classic Winter Warmer: dark red, full-bodied, and malty. Traditionally, Winter Warmers are balanced with extra hops or a Wintery spice blend. We instead drew on our rich culinary heritage and focused on cacao nibs and red chile flakes. Offering chile flavor without heat and dusty raw cocoa rather than sweet chocolate, Adobe Igloo's intriguing complexity will keep you coming back, sip after warming sip.

The design of the can pays homage to the beautiful patterns of Native American blankets and rugs that one may see at many of the markets around the state. The geometrical designs represent the mountains of Santa Fe, and the diamonds found on the can, encapsulating the image of a very drinkable beer and of course an igloo made of adobe, represent prosperity. Adobe Igloo will be available in Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, and New Mexico by next week, just in time for your favorite Christmas party! In January you can find Adobe Igloo in Missouri, Texas, Louisiana, Arizona, Nevada, and Utah. Here's to a long, long winter!
