Santa Fe Brewing Company Resurrects Major Santa Fe Concert Venue

Santa Fe, New Mexico – Santa Fe Brewing Company (SFBC) excitedly announces the opening of our new concert venue, The Bridge at Santa Fe Brewing Company. Most recently known as Sol, SFBC plans to breathe new life into the venue, resurrecting a once vibrant space for locals to gather for great live music. “We are really excited to take over the space. Santa Fe needs more solid music venues, where locals can go and catch great live bands. We want to bring back the energy of the big acts like the days of old,” owner, Brian Lock, said.

There are two 25 foot long stages, one inside and the other outside. Indoors, 300 people can enjoy the show upstairs and downstairs, while they sip on the delicious beer, as well as local wine and cider provided by Santa Fe Brewing Company at the bar, custom built for the space. The outdoor stage will be open during the summer, holding concerts for up to 1000 music fans. With top quality stage and PA systems, locals no longer have to drive far from Santa Fe to find world-class live music.

Located across the parking lot from the brewery, this beautiful space will be an extension of the always fun SFBC experience. A skywalk will connect the event space to the new buried shipping container cellar and tasting room, creating one large continuous SFBC complex. The Bridge at Santa Fe Brewing Co. will begin hosting shows as early as February, and the new venue will also be available for private events including weddings, birthday parties, and graduation receptions. Please visit santafebrewing.com or e-mail info@santafebrewing.com if you’re interested in booking a show or more information about renting the space. See you at The Bridge, where we connect great beer with great music!

Santa Fe Brewing Company is New Mexico’s oldest brewery, distributing beer throughout New Mexico, Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona, Nevada, Kansas, Missouri, Louisiana, and Utah.
